Risk Assessment

Whitby Seafoods employs risk assessment methodology to identify where priorities for further consideration should be taken.

The risk assessment takes into consideration the jurisdiction country for the catch area as well as the country the fish preparation takes place. Seafish Social Risk Factors in Fisheries Profile as well as the US Trafficking Persons Report 2020². The company has prioritised the sourcing of seafood as its main focus due to the nature and reported challenges in seafood sourcing.

Risk mitigation is accounted for in the risk assessment. Risk mitigation includes:

- Direct feedback from the supplier (e.g. Sedex self-assessment).
- Involvement in multistakeholder efforts.
- · Working towards, or achieved credible certification (e.g. ASC, Fairtrade, SMETA).
- Ability to demonstrate compliance with international law.

The most challenging aspect of seafood supply is that the primary source of supply comes from fishing boats that spend a large proportion of time out of sight. Policing these boats and evidencing ethical traceability is an industry wide challenge. The UK's adoption of ILOc188 is a significant move to help reduce the ethical risk within a large proportion of our supply chain. We fully support the implementation, effective monitoring and action around this key piece of legislation.

In recognition of the complexities of the fish supply chain we actively participate in a number of multi-stakeholder industry initiatives. By working together, we achieve transparency through the key stakeholders and approach all issues in a collaborative way ensuring proactive and responsible actions are taken whilst reducing the chance of unintended consequences.

2020 saw the launch of the Responsible Fishing Vessel Standard (RFVS). Whitby Seafoods took the role of Peer Reviewer for the development of this new standard. This scheme intends to work as an assurance for crew safety and welfare on board fishing boats.

We are also members of the Seafood Ethical Action (SEA) Alliance. This body has been established by the seafood industry to provide a platform for collective engagement, to share information on emerging issues. agree best practice solutions, and provide a forum for collective pre-competitive action where it is not better fulfilled by an existing organisation.

The company promotes the application of the Sedex self-assessment tool as its primary vehicle for managing ethical trading within its land based supply chain. Whitby Seafoods will use the information provided to identify high risk suppliers and take appropriate action to drive improvement in labour standards. This includes the option of cease of supply.

We have developed a remediation tool internally and will collaborate with partners such as NGO's (non-government organisations), charities and law enforcement in creating effective protective measures should victims of modern slavery be identified.

The most prevalent accreditations for Whitby Seafoods' business model that include ethical approaches to labour outside UK fishing are:

- A Sedex audit undertaken by an independent 3rd party.
- Aquaculture Stewardship Council (ASC) accreditation.
- An audit conducted by Whitby Seafoods.
- · A human rights impact assessment by an independent, competent 3rd party.

Sedex

The Sedex tool allows Whitby Seafoods to view supplier self-audit questionnaire answers against set ethical criteria. This allows the business to determine if any remedial action is required with the supplier. This tool is being used widely in the UK to drive ethical standards and mitigate risk in the supply chain. Whitby Seafoods Ltd. is a member of Sedex (www.sedexglobal.com).

Sedex is home to one of the world's largest collaborative platform for buyers, suppliers and auditors to store, share and report on information quickly and easily. The platform is used by more than 43,000 members in The ASC standard has a section over 150 countries to manage performance around labour rights, health and safety, the environment and business ethics.

By way of example, the Whitby Seafoods site have repeated an independent 3rd party Ethical Audit in August 2020 against the SMETA (Sedex Members Ethical Trade Audit) standard. We have committed to repeat this exercise every 2 years as minimum. In 2021, we also plan to carry out a SMETA audit at our Kilkeel site.

ASC Accreditation

ASC applies a third-party certification system to its accreditation. This ensures the program is robust, credible and meets best practice guidelines for standard-setting organisations as set out by ISEAL and the FAO (Food and agricultural organisation for the United Nations). ISEAL's mission is to strengthen sustainability standards systems for the benefit of people and the environment.

specifically to develop and operate farms in a socially responsible manner that contributes effectively to community development and poverty alleviation.

Within this there are clauses that drive minimum standards in the areas of;

- · Forced and compulsory labour.
- · Child labour and young workers.
- · Health and safety.
- · Freedom of association and collective bargaining.
- · Discrimination.
- · Working hours.
- · Fair and decent wages.
- · Labour contracts.

Risk Assessment

Audits and inspections play an important part of the due diligence system of supplier management.

Standards are used to compile evidence of compliance and identify any actions required to standards without any address any shortfalls significant deviations. against these. Audits are written to internal standard incorporate any customer requirements. They are an in depth look at the policies and procedures a company has and how they are applied.

Assessments are based inspection and, by their nature, seen at the time. These are utilised by Whitby Seafoods staff as part of wider supplier visits. These often look for physical signs of violations as indicated by training given.

Training and Awareness

Our employees and suppliers play a pivotal role in helping us to ensure that modern slavery violations do not take place in our business or supply chains.

These include;

- Our Fisheries Improvement Manager completing the Stronger Together Tackling Modern Slavery in UK Supply Chains training.
- SEDEX RADAR training.
- Improvement of our New Product Development system to make ethical considerations earlier in the process.
- Amendment and re-training of our Whistleblowing Procedure.
- Amendment of our Remediation Procedure
- Participation in the Seafish Ethics Common Language Group.

Moving Forward

As outlined in this statement, we continue to build a robust system to assist us in tackling the challenges associated with modern slavery in our supply chain. In 2020 we continued to progress our Sedex onboarding programme with key 1st tier suppliers which allows us to map and understand the risk within our supply chain. In 2021, we have a plan for engagement with Sedex to expedite this process and allow us to take targeted action for most impact.

We will to continue to enhance our internal policies where we see gaps against best practice and through stakeholder feedback to put support mechanisms in place to encourage potential victims to make themselves known.

We will continue to educate the business internally and within our supply chain. We have plans to expand our ethical awareness training into the areas of our business that have touch points with our suppliers.

Our UK nephrops supply base remains a focus for us going forward and our Fisheries Improvement Manager will continue to forge partnerships within the industry to help improve transparency of ethical standards on board boats within our supply base.

Measuring Success

We assess the effectiveness of our systems with key measures. Last year we published some key measures and this year we have added some relevant sub measures to track progress. These measures will be monitored throughout 2021 and reported on annually.
